Marriage to the "right person" (not only in terms of descent but also in terms of the character of the spouse and of his or her clan mates) was traditionally crucial for the achievement of status; men and women played equally important roles in the major potlatch. This attitude continued to be held by consultants; thus S consultant H translated the saying k'iwung 'laa qa yahdagan lit. Sdllguu / Sdllguu Sgaangwaay / Sdllgud Sgaanagwaay / Sdllgwa —(Solomon Wilson — when changing into a person)	Solomon Wilson / Tout 1898	Otter (land otter) The Haidas believe that the land otter has the power to enchant men. He meets hunters and wanderers in the forest in the guise of a beautiful maiden who says to the victim, "Come and sit down with me." The wise man is able to detect the enchantress by the pronunciation of the words she uses and so escapes her charms. The unwary yielding to her wiles become her slaves or are found wandering in the woods bereft of their senses. She is also supposed sometimes to place certain leaves which have magical qualities in the springs frequented by the people. Hence before taking a drink the Haida first throws a little water over the right shoulder saying at the same time, "Land otter, land-otter, go from me!"

Owls, mice, and witches are allnocturnal. It was said in M that an owl calling around ahouse at night meant that someone there would be killedby a witch that had assumed the form of the owl. Swanton 1905b:27, however, indicates that this owl (which he calls "screech owl") was prayed to for good luck, and in it is remembered that it was good luck to have one on one s head.

Haida	Pronunciation	Definition, example Gaabuu		Scallop Shell Pattern – Outside of the smaller scallop shell Weaving Pattern-In this case the ribbed appearance of the exterior is due to the use of two woof-strands of different colours, which by one skip-stitch in every circumference of weave produces vertical lines of alternating colour.
		It is in general use on mats and basket covers, often in combination with the strawberry weave. Thus both appear to great advantage, the variegated effect of the one being in strong contrast with the regularity of the other. These two characters in combination are recognized all along the coast, and occur also in old specimens of Haida work from the Queen Charlotte Islands.

		pattern, which was believed to have been copied from the profile of the mountain as it descends to the water in step like plateaus or benches, a form so commonly met with in Alaska. The regularity of this figure does not permit of its use with other forms on basket bands. It generally consists of many groups of parallel lines. Its interpretation is invariably the same, and therefore it may be one of the oldest patterns that has been transmitted unchanged through generations, and its adaptability to all forms and sizes of baskets has greatly increased its value and use.

He is Raven and Married to Jiila Kuns. In the beginning there were five worlds above and five worlds below; the Chief had a house underwater. Frazer 1919 – "Long ago there was a flood which killed all creatures except a single raven. This raven, Ne-kil-stlas, was a person who could don and off his feathers at will; he had been born of a woman who had had no husband. When the flood had gone down, he looked about butt found no mate, so he became very lonely. He married a cockle (cardium nuttalli) from the beach, and he constantly brooded and wished for a companion. In time, he heard a faint cry, such as from a newborn child, from the shell. The cry gradually grew louder, and at last a small female child appeared. She grew larger and larger and finally married the raven. From them all the Indians were produced."Nang Kilsdlas made all of the world, but not the people dwelling in it. He was always playing tricks upon the people who often tried but in vain to catch him as he was constantly changing his form.
Nang Kilsdlas Hll.ngaay Gina sgaana gwa		When he had finished making things he finally turned himself into Ts'amuus, or water stick and usually lived in fresh water though sometimes in the sea especially haunting the Skeena River. He had ten powers (forms) usually showing himself as a snag stick, sometimes as a canoe, sometimes as a vessel like a schooner. K'aadxan / K'aadxan.na		Supernatural being: Ghost Ghosts were distinct from 'souls'; unlike the latter, they stayed around after death (Drucker 1950: 291) and were sometimes seen in the morning or evening. For the Haida, a ghost is said to not resemble a living human but rather to be a small completely white being about one or two feet high. One S consultant said that either their legs or the top parts of their bodies were not visible to humans. However, in a southern story, this word is used to refer to animated skeletons (see Swanton 1905b: 37); that usage, found among the Tsimshian (and perhaps among the Tlingit, whose word 'ghost is literally 'bone person', see Kan 1989: 106), was odd for consultants. No possession is possible. Indeed, no cases of ghosts being identifiable as formerly living persons were known. Seeing a ghost is said to mean that one s parents will die (S) or one s close relatives will die (M). Solomon Wilson / DW - Tape 1971 Side B / Swanton 1905b p.34 / Enrico: Haida Dictionary p. 1487

Kiidas didxwah stlaay		Tattoo Pattern – Old person hand back off tattooed Weaving Pattern - It is one of the most ornamental and widely used characters in basketry. It illustrates an old custom of the Tlingit, the existence of which has been denied by some of the early writers, and confirmed by others, but described by none. Tattooing was never practised by the Tlingit to the degree met with at present among the Haida. It was a mark of position, and was little used by the common people. It does not seem to have had any totemic significance. Only the back of the hand and the adjoining part of the fore-arm were tattooed. The design, was tattooed on the back of the hand, being placed on the metacarpals of the fingers in the position in which it is represented in the illustration, being placed on the metacarpal of the thumb. Besides this, there were three lines across the wrist, resembling a bracelet. Above these, rows of sixteen dots were arranged on the forearm, running from wrist to elbow joint. There were six such rows, three on the left side of the arm, three on the right side, with an interval between the group of rows. The design was copied from the hand of a very old woman of the Hootz-ah-tar tribe from Admiralty Island, who was the last of the people to show this mark. SHIP Weaving Patterns CD – Track 39

Luuwáh		Wave Pattern – Wave Weaving Pattern - A word from the tongue of an older race that descended the Copper River and peopled these shores before the coming of the Tlingit is a design scarcely less popular than the preceding one. It is equally old and widely distributed. It refers to the flow of the tide in its wave like motion, and indicates either a floating object which appears and disappears successively, or the irregular, winding line of drift and seaweed along a flat shore, left by the receding waters.

		Is made up of a series of parallel lines of equal length, horizontally placed, separated by vertical bars or open spaces. In the early spring, after months of dried fish and oil diet, nature craves a change, and the first edible roots and green sprouts are eagerly seized upon. The women and children go out and gather this plant, cutting the stems into convenient lengths, and upon reaching home assemble in groups on the shore and make a feast on the succulent stem, which requires no preparation beyond stripping off the prickly skin.
